

The strength of the electric or magnetic field at different distances from power lines and appliances lies somewhere in these shaded regions.

